

ABSTRACT

A method and system for providing a visualization of an underlying architecture of a software system. The method includes accessing a datafile descriptive of the underlying architecture. The datafile may be transformed to determine architectural 5 components used to form the underlying architecture. Graphical elements representative of the architectural components of the underlying architecture may be rendered on a graphical display.

09971720-100401